THE LONDON CORNISH ASSOCIATION

The Association dates from 1898 although a Cornish Club existed in London over 200 years ago.

When the Association was first formed its aims were to provide Cornish company and fellowship for Cornish people away from Home. Up until quite recent decades Cornwall was by no means so easily accessible from London as it is today. More people have cars, telephones and access to the Internet, the roads are much improved; going Home for a weekend is not the “mad” escapade today that it was some even 20 years ago.

Over the years we have had many varied activities for our members, there used to be sports competitions (we still have the silver cups that were awarded), rambles, when those in London could get out into the country (parties of 30 or 40 were quite common), we have produced stage revues and many other social activities. Today people do not necessarily want these varied social functions – there are so many alternative entertainments and activities and although Cornwall is not nearer in distance, it certainly is in time!

The Association has of course had to change with the modern day. There is now a Family History Group that runs a programme of workshops, guided research and tours of “Archival Repositories”, meetings, lectures and whole day conferences. We also have “social gatherings” and, of course, the Annual Luncheon and the Trelawny Lecture; for the Lecture we invite an eminent Cornish person to talk on a subject that interests them.

Although our name is The London Cornish Association, our membership is widely spread, not only within the UK but also abroad. For many of them our “Newsletter” is their main means of keeping in touch with Cornwall and the Cornish. There are also other Cornish Associations throughout the UK and Worldwide which are affiliated to The London Cornish Association.
